

Problems to Ponder from WarGames

1. If David spent as much effort and time on his studies as on computer games could he do better? If so why wouldn't a student of his ability do better?
2. Does a movie like "War Games" belong in this course? Should it have been shown? Why or why not?
3. Is what David did to school records a crime? Should he be dealt with by the courts and treated as a criminal?
4. List some of the devices and their uses that appeared in the film.
5. Is the girl as guilty as David by suggesting that he change her grade, even though she didn't actually do it herself?
6. After David broke into the "game" he came across some "ideas" that he did not understand. Should he have stopped then and attempted to discover what the commands did or meant before continuing?
7. What is the fine line between "fun" and infringements of the rights of others when "hacking"?
